Henry Blanchard delivered an eloquent discourse yesterday, in Brooklyn, in favor of the new church and its doctrines, and contended that there is nothing immoral in dancing, that it is less harm to take part in private theatricals than to attend operas, such as Don Giovanni or speciacular pieces of the Black Crook order, and concluded the discourse by announcing that a subscription is to be raised for the purpose of erecting a building wherein the members of the new church can indulge in innocent games of chess and builtiards, and the equally innocent (but insinid) game of dominoce.

THE GALAXY, for April 15, 1867. Published by W. C. & F. P. Church, No. 39 Park Bow, New York. F. P. Church, No. 39 Park Row, New Kork.

This number completes the first year of the Galazy; and in that brief space of time this magazine has won an enviable reputation for itself among the new literary aspirants for public favor. It is well odited, and has an excellent corps of con tributure. The topics treated have been varied; and, with rare exceptions, catholic in politics as in literature. The number before us contains a continuation of Mrs. R. H. Davis' new story, "Waitin for the Verdict," and another instalment of Mrs Edwards' "Stoven Lawrence, Yeoman."

"The Father's Ring" is a translation of Les-sing's famous parable, "Vor granen Jahren lebt'ein Mann im Osten," from his, "Nathan der Weise." The translation is fair, but by no means of a high degree of excellence. It is neither very literal nor very elegant. Take the following specimen:

The very simple sentence 'Das gelingt des Kunstler', is terribly murdered in the tame an he 5th line, he speaks of the ring as-

"Storing the virtue in its luscious heart.
To make the man who wore it on good er.
With God and with his fellows." The original is thus:

and ten thousand behavior in the first thousand have already been distribute; it he remaining fourteen thousand will be sent South next week, logether with several thousand bushels of corn. Besides this, the Commission has received a letter from the Arricultural Department at Washington, wherein it is stated that fifty thousand dollars worth of seeds will soon be distributed through the Southern people see seed again; but it will be sowing the seed of gratitude and good feeling that will grow into goodly fruit of friendship and union.

An English physician named Dr. Delamare, who resides over in Brocklyn, who is perfectly sane at times, but who grows as mad as a March have when the wind is South-Southwest, and then loes not know a hawk from a saw (Hamlet lid Nor mean liand-saw,) has been Some Lover's Clear Day," by John Weiss, is a pleasant little poom, which our readers will find on our fourth page. "The Facts about M. DU CHAILLO" give us some pleasant information about that prince of African travellers, who has just published an elegant and very interesting volume under the title, "A Jour ney to Ashango-Land." This is followed by a biographical paper on Vit-times, but who grows as mad as a March hare when the wind is South-Southwest, and then does not know a hawk from a saw (Hamlet did Nor mean; hand-saw) has been cutting up such foliastic tricks of date that I think; imay amuse; your readers to run over an account of his most currous feats of cecentricity. Having lost a larger amount of money in mining speculations, and having next tost his mind as he speculated on the ruin that stared him in the face, he conceived the durinous idea; that if he did not walk fourteen miles per day, he would be a corpse in less than weak—wherefure he started on his tour; but stopping at a bar-room to take a drink, he met a party of working men there, with whose society he was so much pleased that, he abandoned the promensade idea, and proposed to horso; wrestle with the stoutest of his newly-found friends for drinks all round. The match came off immediately, and the madman won with ease. Having overcome the spoutst man, he proposed to handle the balance of the party, one by one, which they accepting, he, to their unfaigned survise, pur them all hors du combat with the greatest ease, laughing so heartly metawhile, and giving such evidences of being highly pleased that of course none of the poly workmen not roused and. One of the jolly workmen not roused to the doct that he was toria Colonna.

The next is by Eugene Benson on 'Literatur and the People." He answers the question, re-contly asked in a sneering tone by the Poening Post: Why have we no Saturday Review? He candidly acknowledges that we could not have them it we would; but that it would be little less than a national misfortune if it were otherwise. He says: "Saturday Reviews cannot grow out of anything less hard, arrogant, intellectually arrogant, than the cultivated and aristocratic Eng gant, that the contraster and actiocorane engine-man; like him with a set habit of morals, and utter deadness of the feelings that expand and re-ciprocate the enthusiesms of humanity. Why have we no "Saturday Reviews? Becar americans, because we have not Oxford and Cam-bridge, and back of Oxford and Cambridge five hundred years of privilege, five hundred years of legal-restrictions. The Saturday Review always opens its subject with the presence of fair play, and betrays so, little feeling that the reader is deceived and believes its critical examination is a dis-passionate search for truth. But before you have gone through its bald, hard, trigid, compact sen-tences—before you have read the last of its cold, tences—perore you have rean the last of its cold, senering and arrogant words, you have been childed with the discovery that it has no good hearty expression for anything human or divine, and you are made aware that all that you most charish is out of the pale of civilization."

stratum, more than suits our tastes, we must, in all honesty, confess that in the main we agree with Mr. BENSON in his estimate of this great mogul of the English literary hebdomadal

Bahamas.

Mr. Richard Grant White, a regular contribu-to to the Galaxy, furnishes a third paper on "Words and their Uses." His topic this time is "Newspaper English." We need not say that his field affords ample scope. Whether or not his strictures will be instrumental in producing a salu-insignated, in the article alluded to, that there is a lady whom For loves better than he does his lawful whom For loves better than he does his lawful wife.

The latest swindling dodge out is the decoy servant game in the intelligence office. A lady applies at the intelligence office for a servant who din do so and so, or sow and sew, and so forth, and a very nice, tidy, and neat looking girl is shown her, whom, after chatechising and receiving favorable replies to all questions asked, she concludes to take, whereupon she hands over two dollars to the intelligence office man, and leaves the office, expecting the girl to call next day. The girl never calls. The lady goes back to the office and learns that the girl has received a letter from a cousin in the country who has been suddenly taken sick, &c., and must go, but that there is another girl in the office who might suit—nothing issaid about refunding the two dollars, and the lady is she is out of pocket that amount, in nine cases out of ten, will take on trial a girl who has thus been forced upon her like a magic card in the conjuror's trick.

Who says that money can not be picked up in the streets in New York? Moultrie contends that it can, for on last Friday, as your correspondent was walking down William street, near Maiden Lane, his foot kicked against a pile of greenbacks, which his hand picked up. How much—seventy-two dollars—honor is the subject of my story—away to the Henald office—advantisement written—"found, sisten of money" to make your came? The following very excellent editorial we take from the Bichmand Whig of Tuesday.

There are those who have such superb pride and such heroic nonctalance that they will consent to do nothing that is required of them. They solace themselves and beguie others with the deasean that to stand still and await events is the sure remedy for our situation. They justify their course by asking what guarantee we have that it was omply with the demands of Congress, we shall be restored to our proper position in the Union. This question is their big gun, and when they fire it off they imagine they have achieved a great victory. As the issue, depends upon the future, and is executory, rather than "executed, they think their argument irremistible. They delight in saying," we cannot trust any pledge the Bepublicans make, and the great probability is that when we have done all that they require of us they will turn around and mock us. This argument is industriously plied by many, and has exerted much influence. We propose to eramine it briefly.

Why cannot we trust the pledge of Omgress, scientify given in the face of the world? The answers they are the concesses of the dominant party, we demy that they have decived us. Thom they down they have decived us. They have threatened us. We have had from them they have threatened us. We have had from them they have threatened us. They have the subsidence of section latingstry, it was their insults abuse and perfect they will be an according properties and the stream of the party was their insults and southern for all years they have been insult; they have one. associates, was abroad in his reading of Borns' chirography.

Mr. Borns inflicted a tremendous long letter on his colored friends. The substance of it is a warning not to vote with the Democrats and late Rebels, but with the great National Republican party. Of course the greater part of the letter is autobiographical, egotism being John Minon's special weakness.

The Rev. Hunnourr made the first speech, quite a long one—the veriest twaddle that can be conceived. Why the Examiner should have printed it, paying 50 cents per 1000 cms, we cannot see, unless it be that they thought the printing of the Reverend's speech was the best antidote that could be administered to any possible poison it may contain. and they could afford to be magnarimous.

You want no confuscation; and while you do want more of the liandy out to the in any other way were groundless. Their votes were all powerful for their protection and they could afford to the inches to be magnarimous.

You want no confuscation; and while you do want more of the liandy out to the inches who were them slaves and to the notice they could have been held as a madman. It afforded him great pleasure to say that all classes fully recognized the inexorable logic of events, and were willing to sbide the issue. They ought not to ask Congress to do any more for them, but shive for their own salvation now, and correct all grievances at the ballot box. All fears, he thought, that they would attempt to do it in any other way were groundless. Their votes were all powerful for their protection and they could afford to be magnarimous.

You want no confuscation; and while you downt more of the land your former masters own, you only want what you can buy and pay for, and sufficient protection in the enjoyment of your property. You want public schoolig, and your legislature to provide for them, and make education as free as ar; as free the poor man's child as to the rich—to the black man's as to the white man's and make appropriations to one or two universities, and makes no provision whatever for the common is the property of the property of the pro anomal os fixed upon us. Here, also, they have kept their word. They did not promise softly, and perform harshly. Their words and their sots have been in strict accord.

On this subject of deception, the dominant party may well and truthully retort, if they choses, that the South has been deceived, egregicully and callantionally, not by them, but by the Democratic party. Before the war, during the war, and since the war, they (the Democrate) have deceived in Those possibly wanted to do what they promised but they failed see do: do what they promised but they failed see do: Those who are prolific in promises, but sterile in performance are those to be distrusted, no matter how kindly their feelings. Phile friends are more to be shummed than open cremies. However, it is neither our object to assail not defend Northern parties, but to asswer the argument of the Dassiyists. We think we have answered it, and we demand, in instite of the dominant party, from a tender agard for the well-being of the South, that we shall, in this instance, trust that party, said do what they require. They will accomplian their purpose, whether we trust them are not, and if they do so against our efforts, either active or passive, it will be all the worse for us. They promise, if we will second them, and comply in the Military Bill, that we shall be restored to the Union. To this Congress has pledged the good faith of the nation in the face of the world. This is the first promise made to us by the Radical Congress. We shade seems how faithful it has been in executing its threats, for us my the declaration from the lips of the promisent Bepublican haders that the returns of the Bouthern people to accept the single promise and colliness what they have to employ offered, will be regarded as a "merewal of the feeling of being safety, na
